SAN FRANCISCO FCU HELD COAT DRIVE IN SUPPORT OF THE WOMEN'S COMMUNITY CLINIC

San Francisco, Calif. (February 8, 2010) – San Francisco Federal Credit Union recently donated $2,500 and collected over 300 coats for the Women's Community Clinic in San Francisco.

For the fourth straight year, San Francisco Federal Credit Union held a coat drive throughout the winter months to gather coats to benefit the Outreach Program at the Women's Community Clinic. Donation barrels were located at each of the three San Francisco FCU branches from November 2009 to January 2010. At the end of the coat drive, around 318 items (which included coats, jackets, scarves, etc.) were donated by credit union members and staff. Women's Community Clinic distributed these items at Ladies' Night and to Single Room Occupancy (SRO) hotels in the Mission District.

Bert Lee, Financial Services Manager and fundraising chair for the coat drive said, "It was a very rewarding experience for us in partnering with the Women's Community Clinic to provide warmth to the community, one coat at a time."

Since 1999, the Women's Community Clinic has used an innovative volunteer-based business model to provide free health care services to Bay Area women and girls. The Clinic has earned a reputation as a safe, welcoming environment where uninsured women can access high-quality health services. The Clinic carries on the long tradition of providing free health care for women, by women. During its ten years, the Clinic has leveraged over 500 volunteers to provide health care services to more than 20,000 clients.

San Francisco Federal Credit Union is pleased to support the Women's Community Clinic and will continue to make a difference through its CommunityShare program by being involved and active with local organizations in the community.
